

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

CRESENT BONE FERTILIZER.—On the first page of this week's paper will be found a long article from the manufacturer of this fertilizer, to which we invite the attention of our readers.

A GOOD SHOWING.—Only four pieces of land were offered for sale as delinquent last Saturday. This is a good showing, and proves that our people, notwithstanding the hard times, believe in sustaining the government by promptly paying their taxes.

MARRIED AND GONE.—Miss Cornelia Rayson, daughter of Dr. Thos. Rayson, of our town, was married last Wednesday week to Mr. Preston Davis, of Marion, S. C., and left the same evening for her future home at that place. Miss Cornelia is a most excellent young lady, and Mr. Davis is to be congratulated on winning her for a bride. Our best wishes attend them.

STOLEN COTTON RECOVERED.—Several days ago Mr. Redman, who lives near St. Matthews, had a bale of cotton stolen from his yard. As soon as he became aware of his loss, he began a search, and succeeded in tracing the cotton to Columbia, where it was identified and recovered. The thief is suspected and it is to be hoped that he will be caught and punished.

REWARD.—As will be seen by a notice in another column the Governor offers a reward of $150 for the delivery to the sheriff of this county of George Hayne, who killed Collins Redmond and Adelia Culler, alias Bonnett, on the 3d of November, 1884, in the Fork. Hayne is a dark mulatto, six feet in height, about thirty years of age, very thin, but good looking.

FIRE AT JAMISON.—Mr. W. A. Hoffmann, of Jamison, S. C., met with a serious loss last Friday night by having his store and dwelling burned to the ground, together with their contents. The fire was discovered near midnight, and is supposed to have been accidental. This is a heavy blow on Mr. Hoffmann, who is a hard working, industrious young man, and we hope he will soon be himself again. He had only insurance to the amount of six hundred dollars.

BURNED TO DEATH.—We have heard lately of two fatal accidents from fire in the Pine Grove section of our county. The first was that of Mollie Curry, an old colored woman, who was burned to death on the 17th of February, and the second was that of Dennis Hutson, a little colored child, who met a similar fate on the 19th of the same month. Trial Justice J. A. M. Haigler held an inquest in each case and verdicts were returned in accordance with the above facts.

DEATH OF MRS. WOODWARD.—Mrs. Woodward, who we mentioned last week as having been so severely burned at Ridgeville some time ago, died from the effects of her injuries last week. Her remains were carried to Fort Motte for interment. Her death is touchingly sad as well as tragic. Mrs. Woodward was quite a young lady and had only been married a short time. Her bereaved husband and friends have the sympathy of all who have heard of the accident.

A CORRECTION.—In the report of the Agricultural Society published last week Dr. J. W. Summers was reported as saying that the State Agricultural Department was supported by the phosphate royalty. This was a mistake. What Dr. Summers did say was that the State Agricultural Department was supported by the "privilege tax," which is something altogether different from the phosphate royalty. We cheerfully make the correction, as it places Dr. Summers in a false position before the people of the State.

ONLY IN FUN.—Mr. W. T. Muller called on us last Saturday and said that the remarks made by him at the Agricultural Society meeting the Saturday before, to the effect that Mr. Bennett was a disgrace to the English nation, was only intended in a jocular way, and not as a serious remark at all. So far as Mr. Bennett is concerned, this correction is unnecessary, as every one knows him to be an honest, upright gentleman, and a credit to the English or any other nation, and it is only made to set Mr. Muller right on the record.

GONE TO HER REWARD.—Mrs. Margaret Griffith died at the residence of her son-in-law, J. S. Connor, Esq., of Middle Township, last Friday evening in the eightieth year of her age. She was an active member of the Methodist Church for upwards of sixty years, and was universally loved and esteemed by all who knew her. The grave does not cover up the kindly deeds and precious memory of this good woman. They are enshrined in the hearts of her friends and neighbors and will be kept fragrant and green long after her body has been reduced to mother earth. After life's fitful fever she sleeps well.

CHANGES.—The Rev. D. M. Minus, who has faithfully served the Northern Methodist Church in our town for the past three years as pastor and who was appointed at the last conference to the Orange Circuit, has been transferred to the Presiding Elderhood of the Port Royal District in place of Rev. E. C. Brown who has been transferred to the Orangeburg District as Presiding Elder in place of the Rev. W. H. Lawrence, who has emigrated to the West. We congratulate the church and the people on these changes, and think that the situation would be still more improved if all the white members of the conference would follow Mr. Lawrence's worthy example.

EXCURSION.—We clip the following from the News and Courier of last Friday: "A large excursion party from Holly Hill and the northwestern section of the county visited the city yesterday. This is the first excursion that has been made to Charleston since the late fire. The party was composed of about 500 people, and was accompanied by a large band of music. The excursion was a most successful one, and the party enjoyed the day in looking around the city, and many of them took advantage of the opportunity to make purchases of various kinds and to transact any business they might have here. The excursion was given under the patronage of Mr. J. L. Smith, of Holly Hill."

The St. Matthew's Male and Female Academy is flourishing, with forty scholars in attendance. The military feature of the school is obligatory.

There is money at the County Treasurer's office for the following persons. Call and get it: L. B. Rast, J. C. Heaton, R. M. Claffy and A. R. Bannister.

Mr. A. F. H. Dukes, of Branchville, is a good fisherman as well as a live, energetic merchant. We see by our contemporary that he has already caught a shad or two.

Astronomers promise that a bright comet will be visible just before sunrise during the latter part of May. It is the comet "1886," discovered lately by Prof. Barnard.

The prospective candidate is cultivating the political smile, puckering his lips for the cordial "howdy-do" and "how's your family" and practicing the hearty vice-like hand shaking.

A man "who never reads a paper" must have a keen intuition. But just publish a two-line local about him just for fun and see how many moons will wane before he will sniff it out.

Mr. T. D. Wolfe has had the two story wooden store on Russell Street next to his brick store pulled down. It is his intention, we believe, to erect a handsome brick building in its place.

We are indebted to Mr. W. P. Shirer for a card of invitation to the anniversary celebration of the "Threnakosmain Literary Society" of Newberry College, on Friday evening, March 19, 1886.

Mr. E. W. Screven, of Columbia, S. C., paid us a visit last Monday. Mr. Screven is a pleasant, reliable gentleman, and we commend him to any of our people who want to buy machinery.

An interesting article on the Woman's Convention recently held in Washington, D. C., from the pen of Mr. Randall, the correspondent of the Augusta Chronicle, may be found on our first page.

The Rev. J. S. Parker, pastor of the A. M. E. Church, desires to thank the citizens of Orangeburg for their kind contributions, enabling him in a measure to erect a parsonage and paying off the church debt.

Capt. J. H. Andrews on the Bull Swamp road had about two thousand panels of fencing burned on Friday by the careless setting off of fire by a negro man. Such carelessness is criminal and should be severely punished.

Our City Council have recently purchased a lot upon which are soon to be erected a guardhouse, public market and city hall. These buildings have long been needed, and will be quite an addition to our growing city when completed.

Mr. M. B. Randle, who married Miss Estelle Lowman, of our town, some time ago, has located at Union Springs, Ala. We dislike to see our young ladies go so far from home, but as Mr. Randle promises to locate in Orangeburg some day, we will forgive him.

The letter in the postoffice addressed to the "Handsome Young Man in Orangeburg" has been called for and delivered to—well we won't give him away, as Bob is a mighty clever fellow, and ought to be the handsomest young man in Orangeburg, if he is not.

On the evening of February 26th a Division of the Sons of Temperance was organized at St. Matthews. The officers were duly elected from charter members and one candidate admitted. The Worthy Patriarch is Dr. Bates a practicing physician of the town. The society was organized by Mr. C. N. Douglass, an old member.

THREE CAPTURED.—Sheriff Salley went last week to De Soto, Miss., for Solomon Ellerbe, colored, who stole a mule from Mr. P. W. Fairley, of Fort Motte, sometime in January. Before he could be arrested Ellerbe succeeded in making his escape from the State, and up to a short time ago his whereabouts was unknown. Fairley seems to have pursued him however, and his hiding place was discovered by a curious chance. He had located himself at De Soto, Mississippi, under the name of McAllen. A member of his family sent him a letter addressed to McAllen. A citizen of De Soto named McAllen received this letter by mistake and read it. The contents satisfied him that it was intended for a fugitive criminal. The circumstance was related to a constable of De Soto, who communicated with the sheriff of Orangeburg, Mr. Fairley having offered a reward for the capture of Ellerbe. Sheriff Salley had him arrested, and went equipped with a requisition, to bring him to South Carolina for trial.

Branchville Dots.

The unfavorable weather has put the farmers somewhat behind in preparing the soil for planting.

The farmers are hauling fertilizers every day to make the coming crop.

The oat crop will be almost an entire failure in this section, which fact has already created some demand for corn in our town.

Mr. W. H. B. Fairley is, erecting a handsome residence in the northern portion of our town which is quite an improvement to that section. There are other notable improvements going on in our town.

There are two flourishing schools in our town, one conducted by Mr. Beltinger with Miss Lena Fishburn as assistant, the other by Miss Bettie Fickling.

There was quite a disturbance at the Methodist Church at this place on last Sunday night, caused by the bad behavior of several young men, who received a severe rebuke from the pastor of the church, Rev. P. A. Murray.

A Valuable Tonic.

WINNEBAGO, S. C., February 24, 1885. Messrs. Westmoreland Bro., Greenville, S. C.

During the summer and fall of last year I was suffering with nervous dyspepsia, which was followed by general debility and extreme nervous prostration. I was treated by one of our most eminent physicians without any perceptible relief, finally he advised me to try your Calisaya Tonic, which I did and from the first I took commenced improving, and am happy to say that I am entirely relieved by the use of the tonic, and gaining my former strength and flesh very rapidly.

Very respectfully,

JOHN P. MATTHEWS, JR.

Dr. J. G. Wannamaker is the wholesale agent in this city.

MOODY AND SANKEY.—The arrangements for the visit of Moody and Sankey to Charleston are nearly complete. The admission will be by tickets which will be distributed by the pastors of the various Churches. As their stay will be short, embracing not more than three or four days, sometime during the last of this month, there will be dense crowds in attendance. Everybody will want to hear Moody and Sankey, whether they care a snap for religion or not.

Y. A. F. Co.—The following are the officers elected to serve for the ensuing year: President, Henry Kohn; Vice-President, J. A. Salley; First Director, J. C. Albergotti; Second Director, F. N. Brunson; Engineer, A. G. Behre; Assistant Engineer, Robert Pooser; Secretary, J. M. Brunson; Treasurer, E. C. Dibble; Chaplain, Rev. Edward Muller; Solicitor, Gen. Jas. F. Izar; Sergeant, Dr. W. C. Wannamaker; First Axman, W. S. Stewart; Second Axman, A. B. Josey; Steward, A. P. Dantzer.

DON'T DO IT.—THE TIMES AND DEMOCRAT has a bona fide circulation of twelve hundred, and is not dependent upon the borrowers for support or gratuitous distribution for readers and we respectfully ask those who do not subscribe for this paper not to read it. It is not fair for those who become so offended with it that they stop their subscription, to read their neighbor's paper. It is an imposition upon the subscriber and the publisher.

A LUCKY ESCAPE.—Several days ago Mr. Geo. B. Salley, of the Fork, had a lucky escape from a serious accident. He was sharpening the saw to his mill when by some mischance the engine was started and the saw caught his thigh lacerating it very badly. By some means he extricated himself from his perilous position, but how he can't exactly say. We are glad that the injury received was but slight, comparatively speaking.

THE NEW RAILROAD.—The Lexington Dispatch, of the 25th ult., says: "The engineer of the South Carolina Railway Company has completed a preliminary survey of the proposed railroad from Orangeburg to Lewistown, and reports the route up Black Creek to be a most favorable one. It is said that the South Carolina Railway is interested in the completion of this new road and will materially assist the projectors."

Snow.—We see from our exchanges that the snow storm of Saturday night and Sunday extended over the entire State. In the upper counties it was quite heavy, in some places being six inches deep. In the North a furious blizzard raged for several days, the wind in New York reached the velocity of 81 miles an hour, while on Mt. Washington it blew at the rate of 120 miles. The cold was intense.

SUCCESSFUL REDEEMERS.—The following persons were successful at the bidding on old State claims on last Saturday and will receive checks for payment on their claims by calling at the School Commissioners' Office on Saturday: Messrs. S. Dibble, Bull & Seovill, J. P. Izlar, Abial Latrop, S. A. Jones, Joseph Bush, A. Webster, A. T. Wolfe, J. T. Williamson, T. J. Fox.

TRUTH.—The Edgewood Advertiser has the following to say of county commissioners: "Judge Forsyth says he never could see why a respectable, decent citizen would be a County Commissioner, and the Judge is not alone in his opinion. The poor County Commissioners are elected and killed by machinery, he is damned if he does, and he is damned if he don't."

WANTED.—Two Machinists to repair the State to all Machinery. Liberal Terms. Correspondence solicited. Address, P. O. Box 223, Columbia, S. C.

Various Changes in Irish Names.

In the days of that unattractive Stuart, James I., an act was passed forbidding the use of all but a few of the old Gaelic surnames, which act was partially enforced. The Mac and the O' were the first and most easily dropped. While the sept or tribes still existed all the members of the sept were, in theory at least, descendants of a common ancestor, whose name, with the O' or the Mac prefixed, designated the sept. The O', anciently written ul, means a "male descendant" generally, while Mac means "a son." But it is only in England that either of these is prefixed to the name borne by a woman, in the Gaelic the prefix Ni, meaning "a daughter," being used.

An illustration may prove interesting as showing how the changes in Irish names have been brought about. The word maol, or mael primarily means "bald," and hence was used by the ancient monks on account of their tonsure. To shave the hair from the head was understood to symbolize the complete dedication of one's self to religious service; and hence mael as a prefix came to mean "disciple" or "imitator" of some religious teacher of saint. So we have Maol Colm (Malcolm), "a disciple of St. Colm," the founder of Iona; Maol Isa (Melissey), "a disciple of Jesus"; Maol Mhuire (Mallory), "a disciple of Mary," Malone, Maloney, and Muldoon are names formed in this way.

The colors are displayed in the surnames of most nations. Among the Irish they originated, not more than two centuries ago, in the nicknames of the common clansmen. As samples there are Finn (in Gaelic, written fionn), which means "white," Duff (dubh), "black," Dunne, Dunne, and Duran (donn), "brown," Glass (glas), "green," Gorm (gorm), "blue," Roe and Radd (ruadh), "red," Leig (liath), "gray," etc., besides the translated form, Whyte, Greene, Browne, etc.—Inter Ocean.

Brazil's Coffee-Growing Industry.

Coffee is the principal produce of Brazil, growing in the mountain country, being better as the hills are steeper, and amounting to 4,000,000 bags annually. Coffee-growing is an interesting industry. The seed is first sown, and when the bush is about two feet high it is transplanted in rows about four feet apart. In four years the bush bears fruit, and thereafter for forty years, the tree being in full vigor from its tenth year until it decays at forty.

The labor is done by slaves, many planters' owning hundreds of them. After the fruit is gathered it is thrown into large, open yards, paved with rock and stone, and on a grade sufficient to run the water away. After some days exposure to the sun, the berries being dry, they are put in the crusher to separate the coffee from the husk.

The coffee is then passed through large and small sieves, one under the other, with a large fan at the back of them, by which means the coffee is relieved of the husks and graded according to the size of the grain. The best is sent to the burnisher, which gives it an additional market value, and to obtain a still fancier quality, though this in reality is only a question of the eye, the grain is placed in a tank half full of a decoction of green coffee beans and water. After remaining there several days this dyed grain is dried and burnished and sold as extra fancy, though it is really no better than the other as far as the quality or taste is concerned. This work is all done by appliances on the plantations, and I was told very recently that several planters have as much as $250,000 invested in machinery of all kinds. This system of getting the coffee ready for the market is of course only employed by the wealthy planters. There are many who are still very backward and retain all of the primitive methods.—A. De Figueiredo, Brazilian Consul.

New York's Fire Fifty Years Ago.

The population of the city at that time was 250,000, and the increase since then has been six-fold. Hence the destruction of 4,000 buildings at the present time would be no greater loss (relatively speaking) than the fire of 1835 was to the city then. One reason of the great destruction was the extreme severity of the weather. It was one of the coldest nights of the season, and this, of course, impaired the operations of the firemen. Added to this was a high wind, which gave the flames an almost irresistible impetus. The result was a blazing expanse, which covered thirteen acres, and would have reached a far greater extent had it not been for the extensive area created by blasting. This was a last resort, and was successfully performed by a detachment of United States troops sent from the navy-yard.

The effect of the great fire was a wide extent of bankruptcy. Many of the richest merchants were reduced to utter poverty, and then there was a large class of insurance shareholders who were cut short of dividends, since all the insurance companies were ruined, except the Chatham and Etna of Hartford.

The next day a public meeting was held in the city hall, with the mayor in the chair, and a subscription was opened for the sufferers. The damage, however, was too great for any such effort, and the annihilation of such a vast amount of capital was felt in the "pressure," which afterward became as famous as the fire itself.

The pressure of 1835, indeed, was the most protracted this city has ever witnessed, and it was seven years before the return of prosperity.—New York Letter.

A Halo for St. Peter's Statue.

In Messenger McColegan's church at Baltimore some gas jets are put to an odd use. A statue of St. Peter, brought recently from Germany, stands near the altar, the figure being clad in a purple tunic, topped by a buff cloak, with fringe of gold. The circle of jets is put above the head of the figure, and a curious effect of halo is thus given.—Exchange.

Made a Hundred Years Ago.

A hundred years ago ladies used muffs five or six times as large as the little rolls of fur or pouches of plush and lace inclosing the hands nowadays.

A Joke on Horace Greeley.

"I am always interested in newspaper men and printers," said Judge Faust of the Utah delegation to the range convention to a reporter. "I was always a great admirer of old Horace Greeley, although I'm a Democrat, and I always liked to read his paper."

"When he came overland, I entertained him at my house right at the extremity of the great American desert—my wife and I were both young then—and old Horace stopped at our house. I played a little joke on the old man at that time and I enjoy thinking about it."

"We lived in a little double log cabin, and the beds were made of cottonwood poles with rawhide stretched across, and the chairs were stools with ox-bows for backs. That was the kind of upholstery which we had then."

"That was long before the electric lights, of course, and we had no gas nor even sperm candles. All that we had for lights were tallow dips which we made ourselves."

"Well, I was a little selfish and I wanted to have a good long talk with Mr. Greeley, and so I played the joke on him. Soon after he got to the house he opened his satchel and took out a novel, which he began to read. That's a fact! Lots of people have doubted me when I said that Horace Greeley read novels; but it's true. He read Bulwer and those solid kind of authors, great thick books, you know, and he read one that time. I wanted him to sit up and talk with me and not read, so I gathered up all of the tallow dips in the house and hid them. Well, he read away at that novel until lark, and then he called for a candle, but there were none to be found anywhere about the house. So he had to talk with me and I had an enjoyable time. He told me all about his early life, how he first went to New York; all that I'd read before, but it was pleasant to hear him talk about it, and he told me about Dana and all those old journalists, and I had a good time."—Denver Tribune-Republican.

An Army of Traveling Salesmen.

There are 200,000 commercial travelers or "salesmen on the road" in this country. Each one of these is selected from an army of clerks by his employers and given his position on account of his capabilities and special qualifications for selling goods. He must be posted daily as to prices, discounts, freight rates, the cost of delivering goods at his customers' doors, and must have a thorough acquaintance with all the goods in his line and the prices against which he competes.

The drummer is to be met everywhere in the business world; he pierces every village and hamlet of the civilized globe; hotel-keepers welcome him, because he helps to make business, and merchants greet him whether or not they want to buy. He spends money, but it is a popular fallacy that he spends his money freely. He must keep down his expenses that his profits may be as large as possible, as these regulate his salary. Drummers carry from point to point their customs and ideas, as bees carry pollen, and in this way they help to instruct as well as to minister to the physical wants of people, and being entirely accommodating in their politics and geographical preferences, they may be regarded as the great missionaries of cosmopolitanism.—Charles Fach in Globe-Democrat.

Raising Money by the Lottery System.

A speedy and effectual method of raising large amounts of money in France, is to have recourse to a system of lotteries, and it is more than likely the funds necessary for the completion of the Panama canal will be realized through such a scheme under the authority of the French government. To show how meager are the returns to the investors in these huge games of chance, it may be mentioned that the king of the Belgians has transferred for 10,000,000 francs to a syndicate of French bankers the authorization, given by the French government as payment for the Kwilu-Nyady district, to hold a lottery to the amount of 20,000,000 francs in France. This sum is to be employed in the construction of steamers for the Upper Congo, the making of roads, and other improvements in the new state. Ten millions are thus exhausted before the scheme is launched, and still innumerable credulous victims are to be found, who will invest $5 against $1, in the absurd idea that he is to be the lucky holder of the grand prize.—San Francisco Chronicle.

How a Mine Is Sometimes Salted.

I have seen a great deal of mining, and know pretty well just what it is; you can't count on anything until you get it. I have walked through miles of mineral, and now have a fourth interest in a good Colorado property, which we are only waiting for the construction of a railroad to develop. But I know of claims, one in particular, where an eighth interest was sold for $20,000 cash, and the property never yielded a nickel. I have seen old miners dig a ten-foot hole, salt it, and then send a greedy out to look at it and sell it for a fabulous sum. The greedy of course got stuck, and his friends with him. That's the result of a craze.—Eugene Hunt in Globe-Democrat.

Arrest of Pulmonary Consumption.

Mr. J. A. Symonds in a recent letter speaks of himself as "a man of letters in whose case long-standing pulmonary consumption was eight years ago arrested by the climate of high Alps in winter, and who has since enjoyed moderate health and moderate intellectual vigor only on the condition of continued residence at an elevation of 5,000 feet above the sea."—Chicago Tribune.

Difference Between Iron and Steel.

It has been estimated that as much as one-third of the iron ore mined in the United States is wasted, while a steel will run the enormous distance of 200,000 miles before wearing out; thus, though costing so much more, steel has greatly the advantage.—Chicago Journal.
